Bar Foreign Ships

Russia To Keep Vessels From The Strategic River New

Russia has barred foreign ships from the strategic River New, it has been learned. The river flows into the outskirts of Leningrad in 1922.

The ban was announced by the Soviet government. It was said to be a measure to protect the river from foreign ships.

An agreement signed between Russia and Finland in 1922 was interpreted by the Russians as a right to close the river to Finnish ships in time of "war danger."

Within Russian troops pushed to within 100 miles of Warsaw, occupying positions formerly held by the German army.

The mobilization period was extended to allow in view of the international situation.

Hedge Their Loyalty

Canadian Ukrainians Ready To Defend Liberty Of Their Country

Canadian Ukrainians at a meeting in the Ukrainian Greek Catholic cathedral in Winnipeg recently made a resolution pledging their unwavering loyalty to Canada and the British Empire, and declaring that they are "ready to defend by arms, if necessary, the liberty and democratic institutions of the Empire, which are the basis of their own freedom and their allies."

The Canadian Ukrainians expressed are patriotic feelings with the Ukrainians, the rest of the world to know where they stand in the case of their country. They have a good example to follow in their new allies—Moldavian Greek Catholics.

Britain's Food Resources
Experts To Assist In Assessing Ability To Supply At Full Paces
